INTRODUCTION.

THIS curious Orderly Book, which presents every detail of the administration and discipline of the English Army in the siege of Boston, has been happily preserved for the use of Historians, among the American manuscripts in the Library of the Royal Institution, in London.

The existence of this original Manuscript was known to Dr. Jared Sparks and to Mr. Bancroft, who referred to it, and made use of it in some few details. What they have taken from it, has been enough to shew how curious is the light which it throws on one of the most interesting periods of American history. While it existed only in manuscript, however, it was practically useless. Mr. B. F. Stevens, therefore, so soon as he examined it, requested and obtained the permission of the Managers of the Royal Institution to have a careful and complete copy of it made under the supervision of Mr. Benjamin Vincent, their very efficient, talented, and courteous Librarian, by his able assistant Mr. Henry Young, and this copy is now printed.

Strictly the book is Gen<sup>l</sup> Howe's Orderly Book, begun on the day of the Battle of Bunker Hill. Into this book, in the regular line of daily duty, are copied, for the information of Howe's separate command at Charlestown, the general orders of his superior in rank, General Gage. On the 10th of October, 1775, however, the chief command passed from Gage to Howe. After that period, this book contains the originals of Howe's general orders to the whole English Army in Boston.

General Clinton having been appointed to take command of the post at Charlestown, the special orders of that garrison no longer appear in this volume.

It has been thought best to preserve the spelling and punctuation, even when evidently incorrect. The accurate student will be glad to know that what he has under his eye has not been changed in any manner from the original. The proof-sheets, indeed, have been carefully corrected from the original manuscript in the Library of the Royal Institution.

GENERAL SIR WILLIAM HOWE, whose orders to the soldiers in his command make up the greater part of this book, was the son of the second Viscount Howe. The family was an English family of distinction in Somerset, Wilts, and Dorset for several generations.

The great great grandfather of Sir William Howe was John Grubham Howe, of the county of Notts, one of two brothers who were both knighted by Charles II., in "due recompense for their respective services."

John Grubham Howe married Annabella, the youngest of three illegitimate daughters of Emanuel Scrope, Earl of Sunderland. The lady was afterwards legitimatised by Act of Parliament, and became Lady Annabella Howe. Her husband's family became possessed of the portion of the Scrope Estate situated in Notts. Sir John Grubham Howe left four sons. The second, John, was the ancestor of the Lords Chedworth, a title now extinct.

SCROPE the oldest son, was the grandfather of Gen. Sir WILLIAM HOWE, the author of these general orders.

A fourth son, Emanuel, married Ruperta, the natural daughter of Prince Rupert, third son of Frederic, called King of Bohemia, by Elizabeth, daughter of James I. EMANUEL HOWE was a general in the English Army, and was Envoy Extraordinary to the Elector of Hanover, afterwards George I., "and from this circumstance" says Sir John Barrow, writing in 1838, "probably originated that intimacy with the Royal House of Hanover, which subsists to the present day."

It is interesting here to observe, that so far as Sir William Howe's incompetency in America led to the independence of the United States, this intimacy cost the House of Hanover quite as much as it was worth.

SCROPE HOWE, oldest son of Sir John Grubham Howe, and older brother of Gen. EMANUEL HOWE, joined King William III. at his landing, and in 1701 was made Baron Clenawley and Viscount Howe; he married Anne, the daughter of John Earl of Rutland, and Juliana, daughter of William Lord Alington, by whom he had two sons and several daughters.

Of these sons, EMANUEL SCROPE succeeded him as 2nd Viscount. He married Sophia Charlotte Mary Kielmansegge. She was the daughter to the wife of Baron Kielmansegge, Master of the Horse to George I., when Elector of Hanover, this lady being Sophia Charlotte, daughter of Count Platen. She was the mistress of George I., and was created by him Countess of Darlington.

While the wife of Emanuel Scrope is called Sophia Charlotte Kielmansegge, it is understood on all hands that she was the natural daughter of George the First. It is in this way that her son George Augustus, Lord Howe, was named by the Hanoverian Royal names. And, as late as 1837, just before the death of King William IV., he said to Sir John Barrow,—who was engaged in writing the life of Lord Howe, the Admiral, brother of our General Sir William Howe,—that “the Admiral was a great favourite with his father (George III.) and indeed a sort of connexion of the family.” In fact, Mademoiselle Kichmansegge, his mother, was half-sister of George II.; he was cousin to Frederic, the Prince of Wales, and second cousin of George III. Sir William Howe held the same relationship to the King. But I do not recollect any allusion to this relationship in the American writers of their time.

In many passages of Admiral Lord Howe’s life, he received marks of confidential favour, which are best accounted for by his cousinship to George II. and George III. Thus at the beginning of the career of the young Duke of York, who died in 1767, he was entrusted, for his naval education, to Howe’s personal care.

William Howe was born on the 10th of August, 1729. Three years after, his father, the 2nd Viscount, was named Governor of Barbadoes. He arrived in that Colony in 1733, and died there 29 March, 1735. His titles were inherited by his oldest son George Augustus, born in 1724. This is the Lord Howe who was killed in Abercrombie’s unfortunate attack on Ticonderoga, July 5-6, 1758, and in whose memory the province of Massachusetts erected a monument in Westminster Abbey.* The titles passed, at the death of Lord George, to his brother Richard, the celebrated Admiral, who was made Earl Howe as a reward for his great victory over the French fleet. Horace Walpole says of him: "He was undaunted as a rock, and as silent, the characteristics of his whole race." Perhaps Walpole means to include the Georges. On his death in 1799, the English titles became extinct, but the Irish titles were inherited by his brother William, the General Howe of our Revolution, and the author of our military orders.* A writer of the time, quoted by Sir John Barrow, says: "The two brothers had in common the sullen family gloom. In one thing they differed, Sir William Howe hated business and never did any. Lord Howe (the Admiral) loved business, dwelt upon it, and never could leave or end it. Their uniform character through life has been, and is to this day, haughty, morose, hard-hearted, and inflexible."

William Howe was perhaps at Barbadoes with his father when a child. But I have found no mention of this early American experience. When a boy, he was sent to Eton, and early in life he entered the English army, as a cornet in the Duke of Cumberland's dragoons. An anecdote, not well authenticated, makes him compare the slaughter at Bunker Hill with that at Fontenoy and at Minden, as if he had been an eye witness of all these battles. It is certain that he was not at Minden. But he was in his sixteenth year when the Battle of Fontenoy was fought, and it is just possible that he may have joined his regiment before that fatal day.

His name first appears in history, under the command of Wolfe, in the attack on Quebec. In the celebrated surprise by which the heights of Abraham were mounted at night Howe led the way, in command of the Light infantry and the Highlanders. The contemporary account says that "the Light Infantry under Col. Howe, laying hold of stumps and boughs of trees, pulled themselves up, dislodged the guard and cleared the path." He and his Light Infantry were the first English troops engaged on the plains of Abraham, and he took without difficulty a four-gun battery. When Wolfe's line of battle was complete, the Light Infantry under Howe protected the rear and the left. The report says afterwards, that "Col. Howe, with the Light Infantry, covered the left wing in such a manner as entirely to frustrate the attempts of the enemy's Indians and Canadians upon the flank." "He sallied out frequently on the flanks of the enemy, and often drove them into heaps."

After the peace, in 1764, Howe obtained the command of the Fourth Regiment of Foot. In 1772 he became a Major General, and when, early in 1775, the Home Government determined to reinforce Gen. Gage, who was in command at Boston, Howe was sent out with them. He was, at this time, Colonel of the Welsh Fusiliers. The volume in the reader's hands shews the disposition which he made of his immediate command on the morning of the battle of Bunker Hill. In an address which he made to his own men on the English right, before advancing, he said, "I shall not desire you to go a step further than where I myself go at your head." He kept his word. It was his detachment which three times made that terrible movement against the American left, in which one company of the 52nd Regiment had every man killed or wounded. Every officer of Howe's personal staff was killed or wounded: and it was said that his own white silk stockings were red with the blood which they wiped from the tall grass, on which the dying men had fallen. He bore a charmed life himself, and sustained no injury.

Gen. Gage was recalled, really in disgrace, after the battle, and Howe succeeded to the command. The very valuable and curious Précis of the correspondence between him and the Home Government, which Mr. Stevens has added to this volume, resumes very thoroughly Howe's view of the position of affairs, and the details given in the Orderly Book itself, leave almost nothing to be asked for the history of the "Siege of Boston." The Orderly Book and the Précis are indeed his biography for the year between the battle of Bunker Hill and the embarkation of the army at Halifax for the attack on New York.

The reader will observe that as early as October 9, 1775, Howe proposed twenty battalions for New York (see page 303), or twenty thousand men. The Home Government more than answered that appeal; they reinforced him so largely that when he entered New York Harbour in 1776, he had under him an army of 31,625 men, the largest and finest force which any English General commanded in America. His use of this force seems to have been soldierly and wise, and at the time it brought him unmingled felicitation at home. Before winter came, he was able to send home the news of the capture of New York, and that he had taken post in that city. The next year he moved the army to Philadelphia, and won the battle, which seemed so critical, of Brandywine. At home this success was recognised with enthusiasm and he was made a Knight of the Bath.

But side by side with the narratives of his successes, came those of Burgoyne's defeats. The contemporary criticism of England threw upon Howe, as well as upon the Government, the responsibility of Burgoyne's surrender at Saratoga. Why was not Gen.

Howe co-operating with his unfortunate subordinate? "A junction between Howe and Burgoyne was the object," says a writer, perhaps Edmund Burke, in the Annual Register of 1778. "It might reasonably have been imagined that the northern army should advance to the southward or the southern army to the northward. But the minister despatches one army from New York still farther south, and sends the other to follow it from Canada in the same direction. So that if they both continued their course till doomsday it would be impossible for them to meet."

Lord North, himself, at the head of the ministry, fell in with the charges which were made against Howe. He said on the 17th of February, 1778, when moving his scheme of conciliation, that without condemning the generals, or calling their conduct into account, he had been disappointed. "Sir William Howe had been, in the late actions, and in the whole course of the campaign, not only in the goodness of troops, and in all manner of supplies, but in point of numbers too, much superior to the American army which opposed him in the field."

To such criticism, Howe owed his recall, and, on the 8th of May, Sir Henry Clinton arrived in Philadelphia to take his place. The contemporary account says this was greatly to the regret of the officers and soldiers. It is certain that the whole army seemed to unite with enthusiasm in that most extraordinary fête the "Mischianza," which expressed, in a "variety of entertainments" the respect and admiration in which the army held him. Thomas Paine gives this account of the Mischianza. "Gen. Howe bounces off with his bombs and burning hearts, set upon the pillars of the triumphal arch, which at the proper time of the show, burst out in a shower of squibs and crackers, and other fireworks, to the delectable amazement of Miss Craig, Miss Chew, Miss Redman, and all the other Misses, dressed out as the fair damsels of the Blended Rose and of the Burning Mountain, for this farce of Knight Errantry." The officer, whose letter was published at the time in the Annual Register 1778, p. 264, said "Not even the pleasure of conversing with my friend can secure me from the general dejection I see around me, or remove the share I must take in the universal regret and disappointment which his approaching departure hath spread throughout the whole army. We see him taken from us at a time when we most stand in need of so skilful and popular a commander; when the experience of three years, and the knowledge he hath acquired of the country and people, have added to the confidence we always placed in his conduct and abilities. You know he was ever a favourite with the military; but the affection and attachment which all ranks of officers in this army bear him can only be known by those who have at this time seen them in their effects. I do not believe there is upon record an instance of a Commander in Chief having so universally endeared himself to those under his command; or of one who received such signal and flattering proofs of their love. That our sentiments might be the more universally and unequivocally known, it was resolved amongst us, that we should give him as splendid an entertainment as the shortness of the time, and our present situation, would allow us." And the same letter on page 270 of the Annual Register closed with saying "I have seen him receive a more flattering testimony of the love and attachment of his army, than all the pomp and splendor of the Mischianza could convey to him. I have seen the most gallant of our officers, and those whom I least suspected of giving such instances of their affection, shed tears while they bade him farewell. The gallant and affectionate General of the Hessians, Knyphausen, was so moved, that he could not finish a compliment he began to pay him in his own name and that of his Officers who attended him. Sir Henry Clinton attended him to the wharf, where Lord Howe received him into his barge, and they are both gone down to Billingsport. On my return, I saw nothing but dejected countenances."

On the other hand, the opinion left on record by Maj. Wemyss of the same army in his MS. notes, is this, "Lieut. Gen. Sir W<sup>m</sup> Howe succeeded General Gage with the good opinion of the army, but it was soon discovered that however fit to command a corps of grenadiers, he was altogether unequal to the duties of Commander-in-chief, of which his misconduct on almost all occasions, particularly at the beginning of the war at Long Island, White Plains and Trenton are undoubted proofs. His manners were sullen and ungracious, with a dislike to business, and a propensity to pleasure. His staff officers were in general below mediocrity, with some of whom, and a few field officers he passed most of his time in private conviviality."

After his recall he was subjected to very careful examination in the inquiry made into the conduct of the war for three years, an inquiry which furnishes some of the most interesting materials for his history. He was never afterwards employed in military service abroad; but at home he received a series of lucrative and important appointments. He succeeded Lord Amherst as Lieut. Gen. of the Ordnance in 1782. He became Colonel of the 19th Dragoons in 1786. In 1795 he was appointed Governor of Berwick, and in 1805 was removed from that command to the more important Station of Governor of Plymouth, which post he held till his death. After his return from America he represented Nottingham in several Parliaments. His family had long had interests in that neighbourhood. But I find no notice of his taking any important part in Parliamentary business excepting in the inquiry as to the conduct of the war, when he himself moved for papers on that subject to be laid before Parliament. He died on the 12th of July, 1814, in his 85th year, after a most painful sickness.

The Orderly Book, which has so fortunately been preserved, enables us to follow the history of the Siege or Blockade of Boston, as the Commanding officer in that city saw the changes from day to day. Howe arrived in the 'Cerberus' man of war, in company with Clinton and Burgoyne, with large reinforcements, on the 24th of May, 1775. Gen. Gage was the Commander in Chief, and at the same time the political governor of the Province, but he had been shut up in Boston, since the 20th of April, and his authority went no farther than the town. Burgoyne always carried the title of "General Elbow-room," after saying, as they arrived in the harbour, "We'll soon give the General Elbow room."

The new commanders, with their larger force, at once proposed to take and fortify the hills of Charlestown, and Dorchester Neck, hills now historical as Bunker Hill and Dorchester Heights. This purpose of the English was quickly made known to Gen. Ward, the American commander, and it was to meet it at once, that he ordered Prescott on the night of the 16th of June to take possession of the hill in Charlestown. The battle of Bunker Hill followed. Howe was directed to lead the attack, and his Orderly Book begins with his dispositions for that service.

The reader will observe that his head-quarters were, for a time, established on Bunker Hill itself. After the morning entry of June 20th, where the orders are given by Gen. Pigot in Howe's absence, Gen. Gage's Boston orders are copied into the same book, and for a considerable period, both series are preserved here. So soon as Howe takes the whole command the General orders are his. The reader, therefore, has in this book, side by side, the general orders given to the whole garrison of Boston, and those given to the particular force at Charlestown on Bunker Hill. The Boston orders cover, of course, the wider ground, and are noted as "General orders," while the Charlestown orders are "General Howe's orders," or simply "Morning orders." Up till the 10th of October, when Gage was superseded by Howe, the General orders are from General Gage's office.* On the 29th of September, Clinton, whose rank was next to Howe's, takes the command of the force at Charlestown. The book generally speaks of the Heights at Charlestown, and not of Bunker Hill.

The full compilation known as Force's American Archives and other similar reviews of the history of the Siege enable the reader to follow the orders in this volume with almost certain light. There can be no piece of American History of which the detail has been more carefully studied, and the present publication, which has long been awaited by students of history, may be fairly said to complete all that was needed for a full understanding of the fortunes of Boston and indeed of the new born nation, in this critical year.

* The 'Cerberus,' with Howe's commission arrived on the 26th of September. Howe acknowledges it by a letter to the Earl of Dartmouth on the 5th of October. But the public announcement is only made on the 10th. Washington knew of the change as early as the 5th. He mentions it in a letter of that day.

The reader who traces here the progress of scurvy in the English army, and who notices the unfavourable conditions of the hospital, will understand why Howe made no active movement during the hot summer of 1775 and the autumn of the same year. Such severity of discipline as appears in the entries on page 46, shews how low was the tone of the army, and how poor the standard by which it had been recruited. Burgoyne's letters have given similar intimations.

The letters abridged in the Précis at the end of this volume shew that no serious plans of invasion from Boston were proposed after Bunker Hill. Yet the English public were sometimes entertained by fictitious accounts of such invasions, and there were moments when Washington seems to have expected one. On his journey towards Boston in July, he took it for granted that Gage would move out immediately.

He himself lost no occasion to press his enemy. Congress was constantly suggesting an attack. Washington called several Councils of War (the most important were on the 11th of September, the 18th of October, and the 22nd of December) to consider plans, all of which till that of March voted that the time had not come. On the 26th of August he advanced his works, in the way which he describes in a letter to Lee, August 29, 1775, "On Saturday night last we took possession of a hill, advanced of our lines, and within point blank shot of the enemy on Charlestown Neck. We worked incessantly the whole night twelve hundred men, and before morning got an intrenchment in such forwardness as to bid defiance to their cannon. About nine o'clock on Sunday they began a heavy cannonade, which continued through the day, without any injury to our work, and with the loss of four men only, two of whom were killed through their own folly."

This movement is referred to in Howe's general order of Aug. 28th.

Had Howe known how ill-supplied with powder was his enemy through the summer, he would have been less inactive.

A return made by Gen. Gage in July shows that the strength of his army on paper was then 13,500 men. But from this must be deducted the large number of wounded men he had in hospital after Lexington and Bunker Hill. There, alone, were one thousand and eight men. There were also the scurvy sick and others depleting this force, and Washington made probably a somewhat exaggerated estimate of its efficiency when he rated it at eleven thousand five hundred fighting men on the 18th of July. By returning invalids to England, and by some southern expeditions it was reduced to 7,759 men on the 18th of October, of whom 1,724 were not fit for duty.—See page 322. This number grew less and less till January, and even on March 5th, after some reinforcements, when Howe sent Percy with a detachment to storm the works which Ward and Thomas had built and occupied on Dorchester Heights, he had but 6,646 men fit for duty. There is no reason for wonder, that, with so small a force, he shrank from an encounter to which only defeat was possible.

On one occasion, Washington had such reason to expect an attack that he asked the Provincial Congress for a reinforcement of militia, which they ordered. Within two days, on better information, he withdrew the order. This may have been due to his knowledge that Howe had taken command in Gage's place, it may be that with Gage's fall, Washington's information was not so accurate. Gage's enemies intimated that information slipped out through his incompetent staff and handsome American wife. The orders of Howe, through October, contain many traces of his anxiety and eagerness to maintain careful watch on the outposts.

The only aggressive movement alluded to in the General Orders, is the attack on Phipps's Farm on the 5th of November. On page 131 the reader will find the thanks expressed to the Light Infantry. The following is the account given of this movement by Capt. Nathan Hale, who was at Winter Hill at the time.

“Thursday, 9th, 1 O’cl. P.M. An alarm. The enemy landed at Lechmere’s Point to take off cattle. Our works were immediately all mann’d, and a detachment sent to receive them, who were obliged, it being high water, to wade through water nearly waist high. While the enemy were landing, we gave them a constant cannonade from Prospect Hill. Our party having got on to the point, marched in two columns, one on each side of the hill, with a view to surround the enemy, but upon the first appearance of them, they made their boats as fast as possible. While our men were marching on to the point, they were exposed to a hot fire from a ship in the bay, and a floating Battery, also after they had passed the hill. A few shot were fired from Bunker’s Hill. The damage on our side is of one Rifleman taken, and 3 men wounded, one badly, and it is thought 10 or more carried off. The Rifleman taken was drunk in a tent, in which he and the one who carried the worst wound were placed to take care of the Cattle, Horses, &c. and give notice in case the enemy should make an attempt upon them. The tent they were in was taken. What the loss was on the enemy’s side we cannot yet determine.”

Howe's army went into Winter quarters on the 12th of December. The reader will notice the full directions for this change of life at that date and at the 13th. It is on the 12th that the large part of the garrison, held on Bunker Hill till that time, is withdrawn.

Col. Knowlton's spirited attack on the English outposts at Charlestown, which broke up so suddenly the performance of Gen. Burgoyne's play, "The Blockade of Boston," took place on the 8th of January. The allusions in the orders of the 9th and 10th refer to this affair. Howe's anxiety as to the behaviour of sentinels shows itself again in the general order of the 21st of January.

On the 15th of that month he is obliged to inform Lord George Germain that he has put the troops on short allowance, even of salt provisions. The destitution of Boston was becoming so severe that the civilians left in the town, not seven thousand in number, were obliged in the month of February to make a generous charitable contribution for the benefit of the poor of their own number. The original subscription paper has lately been found, and is in the possession of Judge Mellen Chamberlain, of the Boston Public Library. The subscribers appointed Dr. Caner, Mr. Paddock, Mr. Gue, Mr. Gay and Mr. Snelling a committee to distribute their alms; subscribing "from a charitable disposition to relieve our fellow creatures from those distresses which are incident to a long blockade wherein the widow and orphan, the aged and infirm soonest and most severely feel the effects of scarcity." The subscription was £144.

The Précis of Correspondence, copied from Volume 290 of the American Series in the Public Record Office in London, has been added to the Orderly Book by Mr. Stevens, because it gives the connected History of the Siege, in the confidential statement made by the Commander-in-Chief to his employers at the time, and shews the reader also, what were their plans, and what dispositions of theirs he had to rely upon. Many of the separate letters have been before published, but this Précis, which was prepared by an English official at the end of the Campaign, now appears in print for the first time. It is impossible to read it without sympathy for the Commander.

The General Court Martial of which Major Martin of the Royal Artillery is president, having tryed Captain William Holmes of the 4th or Kings own Reg<sup>t</sup> of Foot for Unsoldier like behaviour upon Service in his Willfully neglecting his Duty by pretending to be Ill making a practise of it and thereby imposing a hardship on the Officers of his rank in the Regiment

The Court is of Opinion that the Said Cap<sup>n</sup> Holmes appears from the testimony of Several Witnesses to have been for a Considerable time in a bad State of health nevertheless these Witnesses have not Sufficiently proved that he was more particularly so on those days on which the prosecutor lays the Strength of his charge, than on Several other days, when he Voluntarily did his duty, and as Several Conversations and Circumstances upon his declining his duty have been laid before the Court which appears strongly in favour of the prosecution, The Court is further of Opinion that the prisoner Cap<sup>n</sup> Will<sup>m</sup> Holmes is Guilty of the Crime laid to his charge and doth therefore Adjudge that (Capt<sup>n</sup> Holmes) be reprimanded by the Major General Commanding the Division to which the 4th or Kings Own Regiment belongs at the head of that Division.

The King having been pleased to Appoint Col<sup>o</sup>
Smith of the 10th Reg<sup>t</sup> to be one of His Majestys Aid DCamps. The Commander in Chief Appoints him to Act as Brigad<sup>r</sup> General in this Army.

As most of the Artificers in the different Corps are Employed in preparing Quarters for the Troops, this Service would be much Obstructed, if the Number of Men Necessary to make furniture for the Officers Barrack Rooms were called off from the Works & as the Furniture used in Tents may be Applied to this purpose. The Comander in Chief thinks proper to Allow every Field Officer Four Pounds & every other Officer Forty Shillings in Lieu of Furniture, & besides this, the Barrack Master will Furnish every Field Officer with two Grates, each Captain with one, & a Grate for every two Subalterns, This is not to be considered as a president, & is only Granted on this Uncommon Occasion.

Every Reg<sup>l</sup> Hospital may have Three Grates delivered to the Surgeon & Fuel will be allowed them for three Rooms till the number of Sick lessens.

So soon as the Troops come into Quarters the Barrack Allowance, Agreeable to the Rules & Regulations for the Troops in America will commence, beside the Officers who are directed to be provided for by these, the Following Officers are to be allowed Fuel & Candles.

|                                                                         |          |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------|
| A Major Gen <sup>l</sup> is to Receive an All <sup>ce</sup> for 4 Rooms |          |

| Two Mates to have an Allowance for one                                  | 1        |
| The Chief Engineer is to be Allowed                                     | ... 2    |

The other Engineers According to their Rank in the Army.

As the places where the Non Commissioned Officers & Men are to be lodged, differ & Require different Quantities of Fuel to warm the Rooms & Dress the Provisions, The Barrack Master General is to Allot the different Corps a proportion of Fuel & Candles or Lamps suited to their Numbers & Circumstances.

Violence against his Cap<sup>t</sup> when order'd in an Arrest, refusing to go under an Arrest when Order'd, and behaving in a Scandalous, infamous manner, unbecoming the Character of an Officer and a Gentleman.

The Court is of opinion, that L<sup>t</sup> W<sup>m</sup> Hamilton is not guilty of the first charge exhibited against him, viz<sup>t</sup>—being drunk upon Duty, and do therefore acquit him of the same.

With respect to the other Charges, they are of opinion that he did refuse going in Arrest when order'd, and that he was not Justifiable in so doing ; but his Conduct appears to have proceeded rather from an Error in Judgement than from any intentional Criminality.

Lastly the Court is of opinion that he is Guilty of the Second and fourth Charges exhibited against him viz<sup>t</sup> Offering Violence against his Capt<sup>n</sup> when order'd under an Arrest, and behaving unbecoming the Character of an Officer and a Gentleman, in breach of the 23<sup>d</sup> Article of War of the 15 Section, and doth therefore Adjudge that he the said L<sup>t</sup> W<sup>m</sup> Hamilton, be discharg'd His Majesty's Service, as the said article of War directs.

Command<sup>g</sup> Officers of Guards are to be particularly attentive to inform their Sentries, that they are not to fire, except in the last extremity upon discovering the enemy. Where there are double Sentries, one of them is to return quietly to the guard in case of Alarm, & the other is to remain untill he may be forced back. Tho' there are Orders that Sentries within the Town do not demand the Countersign, yet they are to be cautious not to let parties with Arms, or that may appear suspicious to them, come within reach of seizing their Arms, & are to be as much upon their guard against surprise as if they were advanc'd near the enemy. Some Sentries tho' posted next the enemy, having neglected the former precautions lately, the Commanding Officers of Corps are to be particularly attentive that the young are well instructed in this essential branch of their duty; the safety of an Army often depending upon the allertness & propriety of a single Sentry.

The Officers Command<sup>g</sup> Guards must be responsible for all neglects of their Sentries, proceeding from the want of the necessary information being given to them.

The Rum order'd to be given to the Guards, is to be serv'd out every morning by the several Q<sup>r</sup> Masters, to a Serj<sup>t</sup> of their respective Corps, to be deliver'd to the men upon the Regimental parades, the Lines & Block house excepted; the proportion for those Guards will be deliver'd to a Serj<sup>t</sup> belonging to them, upon the General parade, & the men will receive it when the Field Officer command<sup>g</sup> without the Neck shall direct.

Precis of Correspondence with GENERAL HOWE

Majesty's Public Record Office.

Précis of Correspondence with General Howe :

directed to evacuate Boston : his plans of operations : instructions from the Secretary of State : authorized if necessary to destroy all property at Boston : measures to be taken for security of Nova Scotia and Newfoundland : military details of levies, stores & operations near Boston : intention to attack New York.

IN July 1775, The King having signified His pleasure that General Gage should return to England to lay before His Majesty a State of his Command, and to assist in the consideration of such Measures as might be necessary to the future plan of Operations, a Commission was passed appointing Major-General Howe to be (during General Gage's Absence) Commdr in chief of all His Majesty's Forces employ'd and to be employed within the Colonies lying upon the Atlantic Ocean ; A like Commission was given to General Carleton to command the Troops employed or to be employed in Canada, and upon its Frontiers, both which Commissions were of the same Tenor and Authority with those given to the Generals Amherst and Wolfe, when Commanding separate Corps of Troops in America in the last War.

On the 2<sup>d</sup> of August 1775, Lord Dartmouth acquainted Major Gen<sup>l</sup> Howe by Letter of that Arrangement, transmitted to him his Commission, and signified to him that he was to receive the full appointment of Commander in Chief, observing, at the same time, that if in the course of the Service the two Armies that was supposed would act separately should in future Events be joined, the Command of the whole would, in that Case, devolve upon General Carleton, as the superior Officer: His Lordship, at the same time, referred him to a separate Letter to Gen<sup>l</sup> Gage, of the same date, respecting the Force to be employed in North America in the succeeding year and the Ideas which had been suggested of the different places of Operations, under different Circumstances and Events, and he was told that General Gage was directed when he came away to leave that Letter with him for his Information.

In a separate Dispatch from Lord Dartmouth to Major Gen<sup>l</sup> Howe, dated the 5th of September observes to him that altho' he had not in the separate Dispatch to Gen<sup>l</sup> Gage of the 2nd of August thought fit in General to give any Opinion upon the different Ideas which had been suggested of the future plan of Operations, contenting himself with stating nakedly the propositions themselves, yet he had ventured to describe some of the obvious Advantages that would attend the taking Possession of New York, & the hazard of the Army's continuing at Boston. That every days Intelligence since shewed more clearly both the one & the other, and then his Lordship, after describing the State of the Troops cooped up in Boston & exposed to numberless wants, difficulties and danger, observed, that it was not only advisable but necessary to abandon Boston before the Winter & to dismantle Castle William, and having embarked all the Stores and Artillery, and afforded to the well disposed Inhabitants every means of getting away with safety, to remove with the Troops either to New York or to some other place to the Southward, which considerations of superior Advantage should point out as the most proper, and where a Squadron of the King's Ships might lye in the Winter: His Lordship then proceeds to point out the advantages of such a Measure in various lights, and concludes with directing him to make an early return of every thing that would be wanted for the ensuing Campaign, and authorized him to appoint such Persons to be Adjutant General and Quarter Master General as he should think most fit for those Situations. On the same Day, viz<sup>t</sup>, the 5th of September 1775, Lord Dartmouth, in a secret Dispatch, acquaints General Howe with the application made to the Empress of Russia for a Body of Infantry to serve in North America, that in consequence of a favorable answer from that Court the Minister was Instructed to agree for a Corps of 20,000, that the greatest part would be sent to Quebec early in the Spring, and it was hoped that we should have an equal number of British Troops in North America in the next year.

On the 8th September Mr. Pownall in a letter to Major Gen<sup>l</sup> Howe suggests to him, as a matter for his Consideration, the great Advantage, in different Views, of removing, if possible, the Effects in the Town of Boston, as well those belonging to the Rebels as those belonging to the well affected ; And pointed out the necessity there was, from fresh advices relative to Nova-Scotia, of having a particular Attention to the Security of that Colony, he also acquaints him that Goods had been purchased here as presents to the Indians, and that they would be sent to him, & to Gen<sup>l</sup> Carleton, in proper Proportions.

On the 22<sup>d</sup> of Septem<sup>r</sup> 1775, Lord Dartmouth in a Dispatch to General Howe acquainted him with the alterations which had been made in the Distribution of the 17, 27, 46, & 55 Regiments under Orders to embark at Corke for North America, the Object of which alteration was to get, if possible, 4 of the said Regm<sup>ts</sup> to Quebec, & one to Halifax—His Lordship also transmitted to the Gen<sup>l</sup> a State of the Victualling & Store Ships, taking in Provisions & Stores for Boston; acquaints him with the Directions given to the Admiralty for providing Convoy for those Vessels, & concludes his Letter with observing that the last Advices from America were the fullest Evidence of an open & declared War on the part of the Associated Colonies, and, therefore, there was no consideration left but that of proceeding against them in all Respects, with the utmost Vigour, as the open & avowed Enemy's of the State.

On the 27 Oct<sup>r</sup> 1775, Lord Dartmouth acquaints General Howe with the Arrangements made for Recruiting the different Corps in America, and for the augmentation of each Corps, & signifies to him His Majesty's Pleasure with regard to the Officers to be sent to England for raising those Recruits, and the new Levies; and his Lordship, in that Letter, acquaints him that the fair Prospect we had of succeeding in Our Treaty with Russia for a Body of Infantry was, at best, but doubtful.

On the 14 November General Gage arrived in London from America, and brought with him Dispatches from Major General Howe of the 5th & 9th Oct<sup>r</sup> in the latter of which he States some of his Ideas with regard to the ensuing Campaign, premising that Boston would without some unforeseen Accident be in no Danger during the Winter, but, on the contrary that the Reinforcement of 5 Battalions from Ireland, which he had been acquainted were to be sent him would enable him to distress the Enemy by Incursions along the Coast, and he pointed at Portsmouth in New Hampshire as an Object of Attack. He States that from all appearances respecting the Rebel Army nothing more would probably be attempted during the remainder of the Campaign, and that the King's Troops were then Employed in preparing Quarters for the Winter, and providing for the Security of Boston and the                      at Charles Town ; he then proceeds to consider the different Ideas suggested in Lord Dartmouth's Letter of the 2nd August, he states the Objections that lay to opening the next Campaign by acting with his whole Force against the Rebels at Boston. That his Strength was not adequate to such a Division of his Army as might enable him to keep Possession of Boston, and at the same time make an attempt to take Post at New York, and therefore desires Instructions upon that head, saying, that if his Orders should be to leave a Force at Boston, & proceed with the remainder to New York, not less than 5,000 Men or 8 Battalions would be necessary ; That such a Force under the command of General Clinton, would probably find Employment for 10,000 Rebels, in which Case, he would propose 20 Battalions for New York, a part of which to be left there for the defence of that Town, and the remainder to be employed in opening a Communication with Canada, which if effected and secured by proper Posts the two Corps might then proceed in separate Routes into the Province of Massachuset's Bay, as Circumstances might arise—That, however, upon the whole, he was of opinion that by the entire Evacuation of Boston and taking hold of Rhode Island the Army would be better connected, and a variety of other Advantages which he fully stated would be gained : That, however, the Harbor of Boston should be Blocked up, and to that end a small Force might be entrusted with Security on some commanding Spot in the Neighborhood of Nantasket Road.

Upon the Intimation given by Lord Dartmouth that it was hoped the Army for the ensuing Campaign would amount to 20,000 Men, he expresses a wish that it might be composed of 34 Battalions of 10 Companies at 59 Rank and File, and if 6 Battalions could be added by an equal partition of them between Canada & Rhode Island the Effect would be adequate to the Expence ; He concludes with wishing that the Troops for the Boston Division may be embarked by the beginning of February, so that the Campaign might open in the middle or latter end of April, and recommends that some of the old and experienced Officers with him may be provided for in the Additional Companies.

On the 18 November Lord George Germain acknowledged the Receipt of these Dispatches, acquaints the General that every Effort would be made to send as early as possible the Re-inforcements that were required, and that although our Negotiation with Russia for foreign Auxiliaries had not succeeded as we expected, and Recruits came in slowly, yet, if we were not deceived in other Views, he would certainly be enabled to take the Field with an Army of 20,000 Men : His Lordship then observes that all Our Advices from the Southward confirm us in our hopes that the southern Expedition would be attended with Advantage and Success, and that the greatest part of the Regiments employed on that Service would probably join him earlier, and in a better State than if sent from hence in the Spring.

On the 27th December Major General Burgoyne arrived from Boston in the Boyne with Dispatches from General Howe dated the 26th & 27 of Nov<sup>r</sup>, & 2nd & 3rd of December, In these Dispatches General Howe begins by stating that Lord Dartmouth's Dispatches of the 5th September, directing the removal of the Troops from Boston arrived so late that they could not be carried into Execution, for reasons which are fully represented, the principal of which were the want of a sufficient number of Transports (there being a Deficiency of 11,062 Tons in, the Quantity necessary for the whole Embarkation at once, and that if they were embarked in separate Divisions, at different Periods, more would be hazarded than Prudence would justify. He then says they are under no apprehensions of Attack or Surprize by the Rebel Army, on the contrary, it was very much to be wished they would make such attempt; that, however, from Sickness of the Army, and the extent of Post to be defended, the Force would not be adequate to any undertaking of Consequence, such as the Possession of Rhode Island, New York, Philadelphia or Charles Town. He then proceeds to propose that in the Spring what remained at Boston of the 65th Regiment should be sent to Halifax, which, with Lieut<sup>t</sup> Col: Gorham's Corps, and what were there of Maclean's Recruits, added to the Militia which Governor Legge had acquainted him would be raised, wou'd, he hoped, put the Dock Yard and Town in perfect Security: That in that Case he should order the Detachment of the 14 Regiment at Halifax to join him as soon as the 65th arrived: That for the Blockade of Boston Harbor one Battalion should be entrenched at Hull, near Nantasket Road, where the King's Ships of War might securely Winter, instead of Castle William which pursuant to his Majesty's Orders would be destroyed upon the Evacuation of Boston.

That the next object would be taking hold of Rhode Island, with 10 Battalions, under the Comm<sup>d</sup> of General Clinton, that there would then remain 16 Battalions for New York, that there would however be wanting in the Spring 6 or 7000 Recruits, and he suggests that they may possibly be raised by procuring from the Hessian and Hanoverian Armies 100 Men for each of the 27 Battalions; By 100 Men to be added to each Battalion from the Substitutes of the English Militia, and the remainder about 7,000 Men to be composed of Recruits raised in the ordinary method; That after all the Force, when so completed, would not be adequate to an active offensive Campaign on the side of New York and Rhode Island, as there would be but 5,000 fighting Men for the latter and 8,000 for the former; and, therefore, he proposes a Reinforcement of 4,000 Russians, of which 1,500 to be added to Gen<sup>l</sup> Clinton's Army, & 2,500 to the Corps at New York the remainder of this private Despatch, namely of the 26th of November, relates entirely to his Ideas of what had been suggested in a Letter from Mr. Pownall respecting the removal of the Effects at Boston, which he approving, and to the appointm<sup>t</sup> of an Adjutant General and Quarter Master General: In his Dispatch of the 27th Nov<sup>r</sup> he mentions that one Transport had arrived with 4 Companies of the 17th Regiment, as also two Transports with 4 Companies of Artillery, and two Ships with Ordnance Stores, but that the Nancy Ordnance Store Ship was supposed to have been taken, he adds that contrary to his Expectation the whole Army was not yet in Winter Quarters, but that he hoped the whole wou<sup>d</sup> be under Cover in a few Days; That the sickness in the Army had rather encreased of late, from the severity of the Season, but as there was nothing Epedemical it would soon Recover, if they did not wait too long for the Flocks, Bedding, Blankets, &c<sup>a</sup> expected from England; He then observes that the number of Seamen for the Transports was very deficient, proposes that they should be Completed, and that the King's Ships should have their War Establishment; He then States an Expedition which had been resolved upon by General Gage & Adm<sup>l</sup> Graves, for the Destruction of Cape Ann and Falmouth; That it was afterwards found inexpedient to make an Attack upon Cape Ann, but that after giving notice to the Inhabitants of Falmouth to remove themselves and Effects, it was destroyed on the 18 Oct<sup>r</sup>, about 500 Houses & 14 Sea Vessels having been Burnt & Destroyed; He then mentions the arrival of a Vessel on the 10th of October from Gen<sup>l</sup> Carleton giving an account of the dangerous Situation of that Province; That in consequence thereof he had determined to send and had ordered a Battalion of Marines to embark on board Transports, in order to proceed to Quebec under Convoy of the Cerberus, as settled with Admiral Graves; That accordingly everything was ready on the 13th when he received a letter from Adm<sup>l</sup> Graves declaring the Attempt unadvisable & impracticable; That upon this Letter he dropped the Design of sending the Transports, intending to procure smaller Vessels, better adapted to work their way up the River; but not being able to get them fitted for Sea in any reasonable time, he was compelled to drop the Design, and sent back the Express Boat on the 13th.

The foregoing is all that appears material to be stated from the Dispatches of Gen<sup>l</sup> Howe brought by Major Gen<sup>l</sup> Burgoyne; but it may be necessary to add that with these Dispatches Gen<sup>l</sup> Howe transmitted full Returns, States & Estimates of every thing that would be wanted for the ensuing Campaign, pursuant to the Orders he had received from Lord Dartmouth, the Directions for the Preparation of which, so far as they regard the Department of the Secretary of State, will be seen in a separate Precis.

On the 5th January Lord George Germain acquainted Gen<sup>l</sup> Howe that his Letters by Gen<sup>l</sup> Burgoyne had been received, and that the reasons he assigned for not removing from Boston, in consequence of the Directions he had received from Lord Dartmouth fully justify the Resolution he had taken on that head, & that even could he have procured a sufficient Quantity of Transports to have effected the Evacuation as proposed, it would nevertheless have been an unadvisable Measure; His Lordship further acquaints him that the King has in general approved his Plan of Operations for the ensuing Year, and then proceeds to the Consideration of those parts of the Dispatches which Suggests the means of augmenting his Force, and to an explanation of the arrangements that were making for that purpose, and for answering his Requisitions ; That the plan of augmentation by incorporating 2,000 Men into each Battalion from the foreign Troops in British Pay & from the Militia was, for many Reasons, liable to great Difficulty and Objection ; That therefore, he must depend for the Augmentation upon Recruits, & upon the additional Battalions proposed to be raised in Scotland by General Fraser, and upon the additional Battalion to be added to the 42<sup>d</sup> Regiment ; And it was further Observed to him, that the southern Expedition would furnish him with one more Battalion than he had included in his Calculation, The whole, therefore, of the Augmentation, including the Recruits, is stated at 4,400 Men, and he is encouraged to expect a Corps of foreign Troops, not less than 10,000, in consequence of the Engagements which had been entered upon, & nearly concluded with the Prince of Hesse, and Elector of Brunswick for 17,000 Men : His Lordship then States that the deficiency he represents in the Tonnage of Transports will be fully supplied by the Transports and Store Ships already gone and preparing to go ; all which are to be at his disposal after their arrival and after they have landed their Cargoes.

Upon the Demand for Horses & Waggon's his Lordship observes that it is of a nature and extent very difficult to be complied with ; That, however every endeavor will be exerted, hoping at the same time that a great part of the Service for which Waggon's and Horses are Demanded, may, from the nature of the Operations, be performed by Water Carriage, and therefore, he had pressed forward a Supply of Flat Bottomed Boats, of which 32, & 10 Yauls, & as many Cutters were ready, & 40 more in hand.

That the Demand for entrenching Tools and other Articles in the Engineers' Department had been already supplied, but that Directions would be given for a second Supply of the same sort, and also for making good what had been taken in the Nancy Transport: That with regard to the Provisions and Forage there was no doubt but that the utmost Activity would be used in the Department of the Treasury for forwarding that Branch of the Service; His Lordship then approves the Measures which General Howe had resolved upon for sending relief to Quebec, laments the obstacles which had prevented the Execution of them, and States in general the steps which had been taken here for that purpose; Upon the Expedition for burning Falmouth his Lordship observes that he has no doubt that Adm<sup>l</sup> Graves had good reasons for the Step he took, and that the Commander of that Expedition did not proceed to extremities without an absolute refusal on the part of the Inhabitants to comply with the Requisitions which appeared by the Dispatch of the Lords of the Admiralty to have been made to them. Upon the Subject of the Removal of the Effects of the Town of Boston, his Lordship signifies the King's pleasure that if practicable the whole should be removed; but that he must repeat to him, what had been said in Mr Pownal's Letter, that he must use his own Discretion, according to Circumstances as they shall appear at the time; for, however desirable it might be that they should be secured yet it was an object not to be attended to if it should create any Difficulty or Hazard in the Evacuation, for, in that Case, the Destruction of them would be fully justified.

Upon that part of Gen<sup>l</sup> Howe's Commission which gives him authority to Post Officers upon Vacancies, upon general Terms, the King's pleasure is signified that it is not to be understood in any case to apply to the Vacancy of a Regiment ; that as to the Vacancies of Lieut<sup>t</sup> Colonel & Major he may post officers to such Vacancies untill His Majesty's pleasure is known, and His Majesty will, if he thinks fit, confirm them by Commissions here, and, that with regard to the Artillery it was to be understood that he should not fill up any Vacancy but in the Rank of second Lieutenant, in which Rank he was to grant Commissions, and also in all other Corps below the Rank of Field Officers.

On the 1st of February 1776 Lord George Germain acquaints General Howe that the utmost Efforts had been made to press forward every preparation for the ensuing Campaign ; that these Preparations had been greatly retarded by the uncommon severity of the Weather, but that it was hoped that the Reinforcements for his Army would be embarked before the end of March. His Lordship then states to Gen<sup>l</sup> Howe the steps that had been taken for having a considerable Force in Canada early in the Spring ; that General Burgoyne was to act as second in Command to Gen<sup>l</sup> Carleton, and that he wou'd proceed thither with 8 Regm<sup>ts</sup> from Ireland, which it was hoped would be ready to embark about the 20th of March. He is told that if Quebec is lost, and General Carleton should not survive, the Command of the whole of His Majesty's Forces, in that Case, was to devolve upon him ; That Majors Gen<sup>l</sup> Clinton, Burgoyne, Lord Percy, & Lord Cornwallis were to have the Rank of Lieut Generals in America : The old Colonels, who now act as Brigadiers, to be Major Generals, & the other Colonels to be appointed Brigadiers ; That in case of the whole Command devolving upon him, he was to dispose of the different Inferior Commands as he should think fit : That, consequently, it would be in his power either to appoint Gen<sup>l</sup> Clinton to the Command of the Troops in Canada, or to leave General Burgoyne in that

Com<sup>d</sup>; That, however, it was His Majesty's Pleasure that Lord Cornwallis should serve in Canada, and that he and his Regiment should be sent thither as soon as they returned from the Southward; His Lordship then observes upon the necessity of having Attention to the Security of Nova Scotia & Newfoundland, and signifies His Majesty's Pleasure with regard to the Steps to be taken for that purpose; and his Lordship concludes this Dispatch with informing him of the orders given for a Detachment of Guards, consisting of 1,000 Men Rank and File to hold themselves in readiness to proceed to North America, adding only that the King had declared His Intentions that he would not employ any general Officer from hence superior in Rank to the Majors General Clinton, Burgoyne, Lord Percy, or Lord Cornwallis; and that tho' no regular Cartel might possibly be settled with the Rebels for the Exchange of Prisoners, yet there was no doubt that the General's own Discretion would find the means of effecting such Exchange, without the King's Dignity & Honor being Committed, or His Majesty's Name used in any Negotiation for that purpose.

Besides the Dispatches from General Howe brought by Major General Burgoyne, some other Dispatches dated later in December were received early in January. In the first of these, which is dated the 13th December, General Howe informs that since the Departure of the Boyne on the 5th of that Month, there had been no arrivals from Britain, and that there was great Reason to fear from the prevalence of Northerly Winds that the Transports having on board the 17th, 27th, 28th, 46th & 55th Regiments, as also the Storeships, had been forced off the Coast; That these Considerations and the State of Provisions and Stores had given rise to very alarming apprehensions, which were encreased by the great danger there was of defenceless Vessels falling in with the Rebel Privateers, which in great Numbers infested the Bay of Boston, from the different Ports to the Eastward which the Admiral was of opinion could not be Blocked up without the Assistance of a Land Force, which could not possibly be spared ; He adds that the Troops entered into Winter Quarters the preceeding Day ; that 6 Companies of the 65th Regiment were embarked & ready to Sail for Halifax, & that the 18th & 59th Regiments having been Drafted into other Corps, the Commissioned and Non-Commissioned Officers and Invalid would be sent to England under Convoy of the Tartar.

In another Letter of the 14th December General Howe expresses his Apprehension from the small Quantity of Fuel in Store, which could not last longer than three Weeks at full Allowance for the Garrison, and therefore he had been reduced to order some of the Wharfs to be taken up, which, if a Supply did not soon arrive would be their only Resource ; He also repeats that the small Quantities of Provisions in Store, and the Difficulties that Ships bound to that Port met with both from bad Weather, & in escaping from the Enemy's Privateers filled him with Alarms.

In another Letter dated the 19th of December, Gen<sup>l</sup> Howe informs that upon Advices received of General Massey's arrival at Halifax with his Regiment, he had countermanded his Orders for 6 Companies of the 6th Regiment ; That since his last Letter four Storeships had got in with most seasonable Supplies ; That Gen<sup>l</sup> Washington had proposed an Exchange of Prisoners, to which no possitive Answer would be given with<sup>t</sup> the King's Order ; That the small Quantity of salt Provisions in Store had induced him to send a Transport to St Eustatia to purchase a Cargoe, by which means he hoped a sufficient Supply would be procured if the Victuallers from England should loose their Passage : That he had also fitted out two Transports which were to Sail to Georgia, under Convoy of the Scarborough & two armed Schooners, in order to procure Cargoes of Rice, which he hoped wou'd be effected with the Assistance of Sir James Wright and that he should send with this Armament two hundred Marines under the Command of a Field Officer.

On the 15th January Gen<sup>l</sup> Howe acquaints Lord Geo Germain that the 6 missing Companies of the 17th Regm<sup>t</sup> & 6 Companies of the 55th were arrived. And on the 16 February he acknowledges having received Lord Dartmouth's Dispatch of the 22 Oct<sup>o</sup>, with Duplicates of other Letters from his Lordship, and from M<sup>r</sup> Pownall, the originals of which had not come to hand, That, observing by a Copy of a Letter to the Lords of the Admiralty from Lord Dartmouth of the 22<sup>d</sup> Sep<sup>r</sup> that the Provisions sent out by order of the Treasury were intended for the Fleet as well as the Army, he had given a Proportion of Porter to the Ships, altho' the Seamen did not stand so much in need of those Refreshments as the Soldiers. He incloses a State of the Deficiencies in the provision Contract, says, he had Dispatched a Vessel to N. York, where he learned from Gov<sup>r</sup> Tryon there was a prospect of getting some Provisions, & as the Victuallers for the Navy lately arrived could not conveniently afford a Supply for 6 Weeks he was reduced to the Necessity of putting the Troops on short Allowance, so that their Dependence was not totally upon the Contractor's Ships; one of which, however, arrived the 13th with Oats Flour and Pease. General Howe then proceeds to take notice that if the 17th, 27, 28, and 55th Regiments were to go to Quebec as seemed to be intended, and he was also to detach a part of his Army to Halifax for the Security of that Place; These Drains, together with the southern Expedition, would considerably reduce the expected Strength for the Spring, so that unless a large Force was sent from Great Britain early in the Spring he found another defensive Campaign would be the consequence, for, by the want of a Force to act early the Rebels would have time to entrench wherever they chose, in which Case, tho' we should get possession of New York without resistance, we must not expect to carry their entrenched Camps but with great loss: Whereas, on the contrary, if the Army was in Force at the opening of the Campaign it would probably by rapid Movements bring the Rebels to Action upon equal Terms before they could cover themselves by Works of any Consequence; He then, again, hints at the disadvantages of a defensive Campaign but says that if the Army to the Southward succeeds in possessing itself of any Post of Importance to be held he shall not call it off to the main Army, unless Gen<sup>l</sup> Clinton should report that the well affected Inhabitants are able of themselves to maintain their ground; He then remarks that with a proper Army of 20,000 Men, having 12,000 at New York, 6,000 at Rhode Island & 2,000 at Halifax, exclusive of an Army for the Province of Quebec, the then unfavorable Appearances would wear a different Aspect, but with fewer Troops the Success of an Offensive Campaign would be doubtfull; He then States the hopes held out to him by Governor Tryon, that upon the arrival of a Force at New York, he should be able to raise 2,000 Men, and desires Directions in regard to the Bounty-Money, Payment & Cloathing of provincial Levies, and in what manner the Officers are to Rank ; Gen<sup>l</sup> Howe then States the steps he should take for Transporting the Army to New York, but says that Boston cannot be evacuated without the aid of Transports from Europe, and one great difficulty in that Operation would be the removal of the Inhabitants and their Effects ; he then acquaints the Secretary of State that the 6 missing Companies of the 55th were arrived ; That to all appearance the leaders of Rebellion were determined upon an active War, repeating that the apparent Strength of his Army for the Spring did not flatter him with the hope of bringing the Rebels to a decisive Action.

On the 23rd January he says he had that day, & not before received Lord Dartmouth's Dispatch by the Centurion, and particularly the secret Letter of the 5th Sept<sup>r</sup> acquainting him with the steps which had been taken for procuring foreign Auxiliaries and expresses his Wish that at least 8,000 of the foreign Troops might be sent to him, altho' he feared they could not arrive in time for the early Operations of the Campaign upon which the future Success of it so much depended.

On the 28 March Lord G Germain acquaints Gen<sup>l</sup> Howe with the Treaties made for the foreign Auxiliaries, that the 12,200 of them Auxiliaries being the whole Body of Hessians were intended to serve in his Army, and that the Brunswickers, Waldeckers, & the Regiment of the Hereditary Prince of Hesse, together with 9 British Battalions, and the whole of L<sup>t</sup> Colonel McLean's Corps were to serve in Canada ; That the Transports for the first Division of Hessians, amounting to 8,200 Men were then compleated and on their Passage to the Place of Embarkation ; That a Detachment of Guards, amounting to 1,098 Men, formed into a distinct Corps was on it's March to Portsmouth, and that there was a Prospect that the first Division of Hessians would arrive in time, so that they might proceed with the Guards. His Lordship then States his Idea that these Troops should proceed to Rhode Island, that he should, according, give the necessary Instructions for that purpose, in confidence that upon their arrival there they would find Orders for their further Proceedings, or otherwise that a proper number of Cruizers would be stationed on the Coast to watch their Arrival, and proceed with them to such other place as he should appoint. His Lordship then States that great Difficulties had attended the procuring Transports, so that no Judgment could be formed when a sufficient number wou'd be ready for the second Embarkation, but it was hoped it would not be long first, & that the 42nd & 71st Regmt<sup>s</sup> making together 3,466 Men would embark in the Clyde by the 20th April; His Lordship then acquaints him with the Delays and Difficulties which had attended the fitting out the Armament for the southern Expedition, and refers him to a Copy of his Letter to General Clinton, wrote after Intelligence had been received of the dispersion of the Fleet after it left Cork, observing, that the Effect of the Orders contained in that Letter would be that the whole, or the greatest part of that Armament, would join him as early as the Troops could come from hence, so, that, he might be able to open the Campaign in the Month of May or beginning of June; That of late we have had better Success in our Recruiting, and that what Men had been collected would be sent to him by different opportunities; but that it was feared that we should not procure in time for ensuing Campaign all that were necessary to compleat the Augmentation. His Lordship then observes, that as he had in his Disposition of Battalions included the 6th Regiment at St Vincent, it was the King's Intention to have given him that Regiment compleat, by turning over to it the effective Men of the 48th. That, however, by the slow progress in forming the additional Battalions and Companies of the Royal Americans, That Arrangement cou'd not be effected, but that he might take the 6th Regiment in it's present State, and send Transports for it whenever he could spare them. That the Operations in Canada must depend upon the Situation of Affairs there when the Force arrives; But, if the Rebels shou'd in consequence of their Repulse on the 31 December, have given up all thought of Conquest on that side, which was very probable, there was ground to hope that the Army would advance into the Colonies by the passage of the Lakes, and that every preparation had been made here that could give facility to such a Plan; That upon a view of all the Objects of the Campaign, the securing the Assistance of the Indians was an important Consideration: That every proper step had been taken for that purpose, and that Colonel Guy Johnson, who was now here, would be sent out to him with the like Powers given to Sir W<sup>m</sup> Johnson in 1756. That with regard to the wish that he had Expressed. to have orders concerning the Bounty Money & Pay of the Provincial Levies, & the Rank of their Officers; it had been already directed that the Officers were not to be entitled to half-pay, or to have any other Rank than what was allowed to the like Corps in the last War; That the Commander in chief was to supply the Sums necessary for Levy Monies and Pay, but that the Cloathing Arms and Accoutrements, and also Tents & Camp necessities would be sent from hence. His Lordship then concludes his Dispatch with Congratulating the Gen<sup>l</sup> upon the Appointment of his Brother to be the Naval Commander in Chief in North America.

On the 27 April, Lord Geo. Germain transmits to Gen<sup>l</sup> Howe the embarkation Returns of the Hessians and Guards, and also a Copy of his Lordship's Letter of Instructions to General Heister, and of the Orders given to the Admiralty respecting the Naval part; His Lordship also acquaints him that the 42 & 71 Regmt<sup>s</sup> were probably all on board the Transports in the Clyde, and transmits to him a Copy of his Letter of Instructions to Sir W<sup>m</sup> Erskine, commanding Officer of that Corps.

On the 2<sup>d</sup> May Lord George Germain received a letter from Gen<sup>l</sup> Howe, addressed to Lord Dartmouth, dated on board His Majesty's Ship Chatham Nantasket Road, 21 March 1776, in which he acquaints his Lordship that, after all his struggles to supply the Army with Provisions from the southern Provinces and the West Indies, from whence some of the Vessels were not returned, and after an anxious expectation of more Transports to convey the Troops, Stores, Civil Officers & Effects, the Enemy by taking possession and fortifying the commanding Heights on Dorchester Neck, in order to force the Ships by the Cannon to quit the Harbor, he was reduced to the necessity either of exposing the Army to the greatest Distress by remaining in Boston, or of withdrawing from it. That the preserving his Force, when it could no longer act to advantage left him no room to doubt of the propriety of removal; That he took his Resolution on the 7 March, & executed it on the 17, without the least molestation from the Rebels. The Gen<sup>l</sup> then, in order to explain the State he was reduced to in the Article of Provisions, incloses the Commissary's report upon that Subject; He then relates the measures taken by the Rebels to possess themselves of Dorchester Neck, and relates the new Works which they had erected at Phipp's Farm, from which place, and from Roxbury, they had begun to Cannonade the Town; That upon advice of the Enemy's Intentions to possess themselves of Dorchester Neck, & upon discovery of the Works they had begun for that purpose, he determined upon an Attack with all the Force he could collect; That his Attack was to have been made on the 5th March by 2,400 who were rendezvoused at Castle William, but the Wind coming contrary and blowing very hard, the Ships were not able to get to their Destination, & the Attempt became impracticable; That the stormy weather continuing all the next day & night, gave the Enemy time to improve their Works, to bring up their Cannon, and to put themselves into such a State of Defence that he could promise himself but little Success in Attacking them, and therefore he judged it the most advisable to prepare for the evacuation of the Town, Adm<sup>l</sup> Shuldham assuring him that he would supply him with one Month's Provisions. — The General then States the difficulties he had to encounter with from the Disproportion of Transports; That the Enemy, however, giving no interruption everything was got in ready by the 14, and the operation effected by the 17th, after having destroyed all such Military Stores as could not be taken on board, and having also, pursuant to orders, demolished Castle William; The Gen<sup>l</sup> then States his reasons for going to Halifax, which under all it's disadvantages was the only place where the Army could remain until Supplies arrived from Europe; That upon his arrival there his first Attention would be to the Defence of the Town & Dock Yard, which, being effected, he concluded that three Battalions with Gorham's & Maclean's Corps would be sufficient for it's Protection; That he should also detach 3 Regiments to Quebec, and should hold himself in readiness to proceed with the rest of the Army, which might consist of about 5,000 Men to New York, and that, altho' that Force might be too small to expect more from it than the Possession of the Town, which in itself is a most important Post, yet he should attempt it at all Hazards as soon as possible, apprehending it would be more advisable to pursue that Measure without delay, than by waiting for Reinforcements from Europe, of which he had no certainty, to give the Rebels time to form an Army in the Province of New York; That he was sensible how much more desireable it would have been to have proceeded to New York; but the Condition of the Troops crowded in Transports without regard to convenience, the inevitable Disortment of Stores, and all the incumberances with which he was clogged, made that impracticable, & were Considerations which he hoped would lead His Majesty to approve his Determination.

It may be proper here to remark that all the Letters mentioned to have been recd from General Howe were addressed to Lord Dartmouth, and that at the time Gen<sup>l</sup> Howe evacuated Boston, and when he wrote the last mentioned Dispatch he was wholly unacquainted with Lord Geo. Germain's Appointm<sup>t</sup> to be Secretary of State, nor had he received any one of the many Dispatches which his Lordship had wrote to him, acquainting him with the steps which had been taken for sending him a Reinforcement greatly exceeding what he either expected or required.

On the 3<sup>d</sup> May Lord G. Germain acquaints Gen<sup>l</sup> Howe that under the Circumstances of the miscarriage of his Dispatches, and of his not having received Supplies, the step which he very prudently took of withdrawing from the Town of Boston was entirely approved by the King, and in the execution of which he had given the fullest proof of His Majesty's Wisdom & Discernment in the choice of so able and brave an Officer. His Lordship recapitulates in general the Arrangement made with respect to the Troops to be employed on the different Services under his command and that of General Carleton, and acquaints him with the actual State of the different Embarkations and concludes with saying that the plan he proposed for attacking New York as soon as possible was becoming that Spirit & Vigour with which he had always acted; but adds that as such large Reinforcements were going to him, he wished they might arrive before the time of his carrying that plan into Execution, that his Force might be so encreased as to render his Success more certain.
